Contents

John Cullen Gruesser
Introduction: Loopholes and Retreats in Nineteenth-Century African American Literature and Culture
Jennifer Larson and Sarah Clere
David Walker's Vision: Constituting Black National Identity, Re-Constituting America in the Appeal 17
Isabel Soto
"The Spaces Left": Ambivalent Discourses in Harriet Jacobs and Frederick Douglass
Shanna Greene Benjamin
A Trickster in Transition: Nineteenth-Century Representations of Aunt Nancy Monique-Adelle Callahan
Translations of Transnational Black Icons in the Poetics of Frances Harper: Brazil's Zumbi and Cuba's Maceo
DoVeanna S. Fulton Minor
Strong Drink, Strong Work: African Americans Working Race, Working Gender, Working Temperance
Jessica Metzler
"'Course I Knows Dem Feet!": Minstrelsy and Subversion in Pauline E. Hopkins's Slaves' Escape; or the Underground Railroad101
Alisha R. Knight
"All Things Work Together for Good": Pauline Hopkins's Race Woman and the Gospel of Success

Angelita Reyes

Elusive Autobiographical Performativity: Vicey Skipwith's
Home Place and Sarah Parker Remond's Italian Retreat

Mary Frances Jiménez

"Labyrinthine Memories": Charles Chesnutt and Zitkala-Ša's Navigation of the Old and New in The Conjure Woman and American Indian Stories	)

Hanna Wallinger

"Shrinking at No Lofty Theme": The Race Literature of Victoria Earle Matthews, Gertrude Mossell, and Katherine Tillman 189

utors
utors